Taught by Kailan Rubinoff, Ph.D., (krrubino@uncg.edu), Associate Professor of Musicology, & Aaron S. Allen, Ph.D., (asallen@uncg.edu), Director of the Environment & Sustainability Program, both at UNCG, and both of whom have lived, worked, and traveled extensively in Italy.

Never before Experienced.

The Grand Tour was a voyage that young English gentlemen of the 17th & 18th centuries took for adventure and enlightenment: to learn about cultural monuments, see great works of art and architecture, practice intercultural skills, and hear musical performances. We are updating the experience to make it about ethics (sustainable travel) as well as aesthetics and to provide a contemporary framework for learning and experience.

DESCRIPTION

Embark on a historical and artistic recreation of the “Grand Tour” experience! Join us for a spring 2022 on-campus class followed by a summer trip through Italy as we explore the major sites that the 17th - and 18th-century “Grand Tourists” visited.

The main theme of our trip will be the favorite activity of the Grand Tourists: music. In the summer trip portion of the course, we’ll attend concerts and operas; we’ll also visit museums and archeological sites, including Pompeii, whose rediscovery and excavation in 1748 was an astonishing revelation. During the spring semester portion of the course, we will explore in advance (through study, lectures, presentations, and discussion) the music and places that we will visit over the summer. We will arrive in Milan via the decidedly modern conveyance of an airplane but then use trains and boats to travel from city to city—highlights include arriving into Venice by canal boat. In addition to music, another theme will be sustainable travel: efficient public transportation, low-impact accommodations, Slow Food dining, and an exploration of local Italian nature, history, and culture beyond mass tourism.

Our Grand Tour takes place in two parts. Part 1 is a 3-credit spring-term class in which we will explore the historical phenomenon of the Grand Tour through the study of the documents, music, and literature of the period; we will also examine the modern impact of travel and the solutions offered by sustainable tourism. (Course work includes reading and listening, short papers and presentations, and a final research project in lieu of an exam.) In place of this class, students may take any of a number of other courses as pre-requisites (various classes offered by Dr. Allen or Dr. Rubinoff, or both STH 200 and 231; other courses/experiences may be relevant, so please ask). Part 2 is the trip component: this is a graded 6-credit class, and course work includes travel assignments, readings and discussions, and a reflective project upon completion of trip in lieu of exam.

Students may take the on-campus class (Part 1) without the trip component (Part 2). But students who wish to travel in the summer should take the spring class (or equivalent). This class is open to students (undergraduate and graduate) in all majors. It is especially of interest to students in anthropology, art and art history, classics, English, environmental and sustainability studies, geography, history, music, Romance languages, sustainable tourism and hospitality, as well as other related fields. The courses can count for credit (usually elective) in various music degrees (undergraduate and graduate), the B.A. in sustainable tourism and hospitality, the B.A. in environment & sustainability, and the minors in environment and in sustainability.

All program directors and participants are REQUIRED to be fully vaccinated for COVID-19 prior to departure in order to participate in faculty-led study abroad programs. UNCG reserves the right to cancel or alter the program format, or to change costs in case of conditions beyond its control.

The back cover of this brochure is a facsimile of the title page from Richard Lassels, Complete Journey through Italy (Paris, 1670). Lassels traveled through Italy about a half dozen times as a tutor to English nobility. Dr. Allen has lived in Italy for two years (one year in Rome, another year in Bologna) and has visited nearly two dozen times; Dr. Rubinoff has lived in Rome for one year and has visited nearly a dozen times (she also lived for five years in Amsterdam and returns there frequently for research). Both professors led the 2016 & 2019 Grand Tours, speak Italian, and have traveled extensively in England, France, Germany, Austria, and other countries associated with the Grand Tour.
